840. Planet X debris piece suspended in the earth's atmosphere

Dr. Claudia Albers, Planet X Researcher

Figure 1 shows what seems to be a piece of rock floating in the earth's atmosphere. The object is rotating, a bright glow can be seen inside it, which is similar to the glow seen emanating from meteors, suggesting that it contains meteor material inside it. The object appears to have two recesses, inside it, which seem to have a spherical shape and would thus most likely accommodate two spherical cores.

Figure 1. A brown object in the sky over Mexico, on March 30, 2019, with a recess or hole inside, which seems to be shaped like two spheres next to each other. The bright light looks like an electrical fire and thus suggests that energy transfer is manifesting as an electric current at the point where the light appears and would suggest that the glowing material is what meteors are made of (Source: YouTube Video by Mavi777, from 12 May 2019, entitled: Enormous UFO stands on the mountain over Russia! April 1, 2019) [1].

The color of the object (brown) suggests it is ground or rock, i.e. what a planet is made of. The shape of the object suggests that it part of a shell around two cores inside the body of a planet. This would mean that meteor material is Planet X debris which must have been right next to a Planet X Stellar Core (SC), when the Planet X planets broke up, due to energy depletion, which caused all the created matter to break into pieces and the cores that had created the material to be released from inside it. This turned each planet into a jumbled mess of cores, surrounded by a debris field. This object, therefore, appears to be a piece of Planet X debris.

Figure 2. Meteors do not glow due to friction, but due to being energy depleted and fast absorbers of the energy, which continuously flows through the earth's atmosphere from the earth's core, which then manifests as an electric current at the location of the object, within the earth's atmosphere (see Article 779: Meteors are Planet X debris: glow is due to electric current and Article 818: Planet X observations: the electrical universe is made of light) [2, 3].

The fact that certain meteors get much brighter, than others, would suggest that larger SCs created meteor material with a stronger ability to draw current, within the earth's atmosphere, which then causes them to glow more brightly than meteor material created by smaller Planet X SCs.

Figure 3. Illustration of the Planet X planets break up process, due to energy depletion, which turned all the created planetary material that was not core material into a debris field. However, instead of one core, there is actually a core system with cores of different sizes making it up and surrounded by material, which the cores created and controlled, i.e. planetary body material.

Figure 4. The debris piece hovers in the earth's atmosphere because it is low in gravitational energy. The position of matter, within the atmosphere of a planet, does not depend on its density but on its gravitational energy, i.e. on how much energy, in the form of photons, is contained inside the matter. Planet X matter, be it rocks, or blocks of ice, are low in gravitational energy and thus remain suspended in the atmosphere, in the same way, that gaseous earth material, of much less density normally remains suspended in the atmosphere (see Article 732: Rocks falling from the sky: Planet X debris field) [4].

Figure 5. The Planet X debris piece which was a type of shell to two small SCs and that contains meteor material inside it. This meteor material would thus have been in contact with the SCs.

The cores, which were inside this piece of broken planet, seem to have been very small, which suggests that they were close to the surface of the planet, since core matter splits into smaller and smaller pieces as we move outwards from the central core. The closer to the surface the piece was, the slower it will absorb energy, but obviously the meteor material inside it absorbs energy much faster than the rest of the debris material making up the object.

In conclusion, a Planet X debris piece suspended in the earth's atmosphere with two spherical recesses inside it, and material emitting light as we would expect from a meteor is additional evidence to the fact that Planet X planets broke up and their core systems and debris fields are coming into the earth's atmosphere. Meteor material seems to have been material which was right next to and in contact with the cores of the Planet X planets, which we now refer to as SCs.
